

Looking for Paoli
Documentary by Corsicans – Sorba and Aiqui
November 8 at 7:00pm at Delaware Valley Friends

We all seem to know that our town, Paoli, was named after a famous Corsican freedom fighter – Pasquale Paoli. Now we have a rare event happening next week – we are a part of a documentary made by Corsican playwrights who will premiere the film right here in Paoli at the Delaware Valley Friends School.

- Time 7:00 pm on Thursday, November 8
- Address: 19 E. Central Avenue, Paoli

In the film are Ed Auble and Barbara Mangos representing our town of Paoli. See how they and we fit into a greater world picture of time and place through the eyes of these international film makers.

The film concerns how a Corsican from the birthplace of General Paoli views universal humanism in America today. This is a modern day "Democracy in America", an opportunity to see ourselves through the eyes of others.

Who would be interested in this experience? History majors or just buffs, sociology curiosity seekers, Francophiles, Paoli residents, politicians, anyone who has lived and loved Paoli or this whole country.

The film will be preceded with remarks by the creators - Catherine Sorba and Francis Aiqui from Corsica. Intriguing and powerful, this is a once in a life time evening to see ourselves from a totally, objective perspective.

Catherine and Francis will also be debuting this documentary at the Alliance Francaise in Philadelphia after our initial performance.
